

School Based Health Centers

School Based Health Centers Defined

- Section 2110(c)(9) of the Social Security Act defines a school-based health center as the following:
- Is located in or near a school facility of a school district or board, or of an Indian tribe or tribal organization;
- Is organized through school, community, and health provider relationships;
- Is administered by a sponsoring authority
- Provides through health professionals primary health services and mental health services to children in accordance with State and local law, including laws relating to licensure and certification; and
- Satisfies such other requirements as a State may establish for the operation of such a clinic.

SBHC Common Characteristics

- Located in schools or on school grounds.
- Work cooperatively within the school to become an integral part of the school.
- Provide a comprehensive range of services that meet the specific physical and behavioral health needs of the young people in the community.
- Employ a multidisciplinary team of providers to care for the students: nurse practitioners, registered nurses, physician assistants, social workers, physicians, alcohol and drug counselors, and other health professionals.
- Provide clinical services through a qualified health provider such as a hospital, health department, or medical practice.
- Require parents to sign written consents for their children to receive the full scope of services provided at the SBHC.
- Have an advisory board consisting of community representatives, parents, youth, and family organizations, to provide planning and oversight.

SBHC Common Sense

- Provides access to care for students without the barriers families too often face
- Provides the 'caulk' at the intersection of education and health that prevents students from falling through the cracks. (NASBHC, 2012)
